Days of Discovery...

The State Park offers the perfect setting for the "longhouse" styled in the fashion of the ancient communal dwellings of the Northwest Coast Indians.

Upon completion, the huge cedar longhouse was donated to the State of Washington. Tillicum Village, however, was built and is operated with private funds. The facility is under lease, operated in conjunction with the Washington State Parks and Recreation Commission.

"Tillicum Village on Blake Island typifies the Northwest...it combines the best of what this area has to offer -- a chance to get out on the water, magnificent views, wildlife, lush vegetation, fresh salmon and Indian dancing."

Hilda Anderson, Seattle Post-Intelligencer

"Those darling deer, that delicious dinner, the exciting production... I hated to leave."

Nancy Leson, Seattle Times Restaurant Critic

"Don't wait for guests-visit Tillicum Village."

Jon Hahn, Seattle P-I

Tillicum Village has been sharing Northwest Traditions since 1962. Its name, "Tillicum," comes from the Chinook jargon meaning "friendly people." Along with an award-winning, traditionally baked salmon dinner, guests are treated to a magical stage production, arts and crafts demonstrations and given an opportunity to explore the island's many hiking trails and beaches.

...Nights of Wonder

The evening dinner cruise offers magical sunsets behind the Olympic Mountains and views of Seattle's spectacular night skyline.
